There is a wide array of lodging, ranging from four-star La Casa del Zorro (pricey) to modest motels, to a couple of very nice B & B's. (Make your reservations early.)

EQUIPMENT LIST:

PHOTOGRAPHIC: Camera, tripod (very important), lenses, lots of SLIDE film, or memory cards and whatever you normally carry on a photo expedition. Don't forget extra batteries, owner's manual, a notebook for keeping track of images, polarizing filter, an extra camera body, if available, etc.

GENERAL: Clothing for both warm and chilly weather – bring layers if possible. A raincoat would be advisable, along with long pants, shorts if you like, a hat, boots for walking in rough terrain, as well as shoes for walking on muddy ground, sunblock, and at least two each one-quart water containers per person. There will be some driving (20-40 mile) each day. There are several restaurants in the area for your evening meals. Saturday will be a full day of photographic opportunities. We will leave early Saturday morning at 7am and return just before nightfall. Please bring a sack lunch, drinks and/or snacks. Sunday will begin "very early" and conclude our photo expedition around 12noon. The trip will "go", rain or shine, although itinerary may change due to flooding or road damage. There will be at least two hikes of 1.5 to 2 miles each, over rough terrain and steep slopes.

NOTE: We will visit several highly photogenic locations in Anza Borrego Desert State Park.
