Where Are They Now?

JADENE DUGAS, San Marcos, CA

It was Bob Burton, Dean of Admissions, who, in December 1963, offered me a position in the Admissions & Records Office. This would be the beginning of what turned out to be an 18-year tenure at Palomar College. I had been working in the Admissions Office for one year when the position of Secretary to the Dean of Instruction (Virgil Bergman) became available. I applied, was chosen, and the rest is history. That year... it was 1964... Dr. Fred Huber was also hired as Superintendent/President.

continued to travel. For our 50th wedding anniversary we took the Panama Canal Cruise. We later enjoyed cruises to the Mexican Riviera and Alaska. Also, upon my return to Vista, Fred Huber called and asked me to join PACRA and to run for the position of Vice President of the Board of Directors. He was running for the position of President. I did not hesitate... I accepted his offer. We were both elected to our respective positions, and I must say it felt so good to be back as a part of Palomar College.

My happiness and active life-style slowed down after knee and back surgery. Art and family helped care for me and I was getting stronger when on February 1, 2014, Art was stricken with a heart attack, which ended his life. We had 64 years of a great marriage and I have much to be grateful for, but I was devastated. In April 2014 I moved to Brookdale Senior Living in San Marcos.

I feel blessed to be in a lovely assisted living apartment close to family and friends. I continue to serve on the PACRA Board and am pleased to be able to continue with that service. I am now 83 years old and it is great to look forward to a new kind of life that continues to be productive, interesting and rewarding.

In 1993, when Art retired from what was now Boeing Helicopters, we began our travels in a 1934 Pace Arrow motor home. Our first extensive trip lasted 5 months and we covered all contiguous states except for Maine and Vermont. It was a wonderful adventure.

In November 1993 we moved back to Vista, CA, but we

Scholarship Donation Opportunity

The PACRA Board would like to enhance its scholarship fund so it can offer additional financial assistance (i.e., an additional scholarship opportunity or book grant) to a relative of a PACRA member in good standing. If you are interested in helping with this effort you can do so by making a tax-deductible donation to the PACRA scholarship fund. Simply go to the PACRA website at HYPERLINK "http://www.palomar.edu/pacra" www.palomar.edu/pacra. Click the 'Donate' link; select an amount; select PACRA (Palomar College Retirees' Association) from the drop down menu and then complete the payment process. Again... all donations are tax deductible.

PACRA Request for your E-mail Address...

➔ If you haven't already done so, PACRA would very much appreciate having your e-mail address on file. If you prefer we not publish it in our Membership Directory please just let us know. We will honor your request for privacy. There are occasions when your Board feels it is in your/our best interest to alert you to events and/or activities that may affect your benefits, and due to the ever-increasing cost of postage it is far more cost-effective for us to do so through e-mail rather than US mail. Thank you for your support.

Looking Back

Historical Tidbits — Let it snow, let it snow, let it snow

One of the many treasures found in the Palomar College Library is a nearly complete collection of The Telescope student newspaper, starting with Vol. 1, No. 1, November 26, 1947. Within that collection is one unique issue, December 14, 1967, Vol. 21, No. 13, The Snowscope, A frosty edition of The Telescope. The Snowscope documents the "First snow storm in the College's 21-year history."

December 13, 1967 was a memorable day in San Diego when gale force winds blew a Canadian cold front "far, far off course," dumping snow west of the Lagunas and into the City of San Diego. Snowfalls ranged from 2 feet on Palomar Mountain to 2 inches at Palomar Airport. The early morning snowfall was unique in both quantity and how far west it fell.

Palomar College Library Technician Kelly Patrick remembers the following from his student days at MiraCosta College.

"After my early classes I walked over to the student union/cafe-teria on the east side of campus. Other students coming in were exclaiming how cold it was, and then from the gray sky, snow began to fall, lightly at first, then a bit heavier. It blanketed the entire lawn; all the cars and plants had their own salting, which to us seemed thick and amazing. We all went outside to throw snowballs and build miniature snow-people. I was wearing my standard Huaraches with tire tread soles and sweat socks. Not much protection from the elements, and my feet became painfully cold quickly."

I expect Kelly's description would be echoed by Palomar students attending classes that memorable day because a few miles to the east found Palomar's distinctive dome and the rest of the campus blanketed in a considerable amount of snow. Tom Humphrey recalls, "It was an exciting day. As we know it doesn't snow much in our community. I took lots of pictures because I happened to have film.

in my camera. Many didn't have any pictures to remember the storm by because stores quickly sold out of film."

Thanks to the work of faculty members Ted Kilman, Jim McNutt and Jus Ahrend, Palomar's "snow day" was recorded in print and published the following day. Under the supervision of these faculty members Journalism and Photography students developed their own photographs, wrote copy, designed the composition and set type. Ted recalls this as "a great academic activity," and it is important to remember that in 1967, these tasks required typewriters, chemical developing and hand typesetting. This was done in record time despite an indoor snowball fight raging in the newspaper offices.

If you are interested in this document or any of the other 60-plus years of events described by The Telescope or local newspaper articles in the College scrapbook collection, drop by the second floor of the Library. Someone will be happy to help you locate them. ◆

NEWS BRIEFS

1 Humanities Building Completed

Palomar College's new $34 million Humanities building is energy-efficient and cutting-edge in design. But its greatest value to students and faculty is how it brings together departments that were scattered across campus in 40-year-old buildings. Construction on the building started in November 2011 and was finished in March 2014. Students have been attending classes inside the building since the start of the 2014 summer session.

Located in the center of the San Marcos campus, the 90,000 square-foot, three-story building includes 81 offices, 25 classrooms and multiple learning laboratories. The new building is home to the college's reading center, writing center, English, world languages, reading, speech, English as a Second Language, American Sign Language and journalism departments.

The building also houses a newsroom for the college newspaper — The Telescope — and a place where Palomar's award-winning speech and debate team can conduct research and prepare and fine-tune their craft.

The building project was funded by Proposition M, a $694 million bond measure approved by voters in 2006 to replace, expand or modernize learning facilities on Palomar campuses.

Previous work completed using Prop M bond monies were, among others, a new teaching and learning center, a new multidisciplinary building, health sciences building, and the remodeling of the Howard Brubeck Theatre and the Escondido satellite campus.

A new child development center is expected to break ground in the near future.

2 It's all in a Name

A new option available to supporters of student success at Palomar College allows donors to leave a legacy by naming a building, classroom, laboratory or other public facility. Trustees approved the new option in May 2013. It allows an individual, company or foundation to become a highly visible and permanent partner with Palomar College. Naming gifts are placed in an endowment fund that is closely monitored by the Palomar College Foundation Investment Committee. Income from endowment funds provides long-term stability for Palomar College student success programs.

A naming rights gift is a personal and significant decision that should reflect the donor's interests. College staff, including President Deegan and the appropriate Dean or Vice President, will work with donors to identify naming opportunities. The construction of a variety of new buildings funded by Proposition M in 2006, provides a wide range of choices, including: Escondido Education Center; Health Sciences Building; Humanities Building; Industrial Technology Complex; Multidisciplinary Building; Natural Sciences Building; Palomar Planetarium; and the Performing Arts Complex.
